THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA

The Annual Meeting of the Jewish Publication Society of America was held on Sunday evening, March 25, 1923, at the Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, Philadelphia, Pa. The President of the Society, Mr. Simon Miller, acted as Chairman, and Mr. I. George Dobsevage, of Philadelphia, as Secretary.

Rabbi F. M. Isserman, of Philadelphia, opened the meeting with prayer. The President read the following report of the Society's activities:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

We are here to report the results of our stewardship for the year ending February 28, 1923, which was the thirty-fourth in the life of the Society.

Since its inception the Society has published about 123 volumes and has issued over one and three-quarter millions of copies of its publications—all of which were of Jewish interest, most of them of considerable merit, and a number of real permanent value.

It is well to reiterate that were it not for the Society the works of Graetz, Dubnow, Karpeles, Abrahams, Jacobs, Ginzberg, Halper, Margolis, Lazarus, Malter, Perez, Schechter, and Zangwill, if they had seen the light of day, would never have been so widely distributed, read or studied. By the publication of "The History of the Jews", "The History of the Jews of Russia and Poland"; "The Legends of the Jews", "Jewish Life in the Middle Ages", "Jewish Contributions to Civilization", "Ethics of Judaism", "Studies in Judaism", "Post-Biblical Hebrew Literature", and "Children of the Ghetto", the nucleus of a Jewish library of great cultural value was created. By their publication and distribution the Society has faithfully carried out the purpose for which it was established, namely—"for the publication and dissemination of literary, scientific and religious works, giving instruction in the principles of Jewish religion and in Jewish history and literature".

With some of our publications we have striven to reach the level of the intelligent Jew, aiming to develop a taste for higher literature. Our catalogue consists of titles which the scholar in his pride may regard as light literature and which the average layman in his humility may consider too 'heavy'. We have published "Think and Thank" for our Jewish boys and girls; "Studies in Judaism" for maturer minds. We issued "Outlines of Jewish History" for school use, and Dubnow's "Jewish History" for such as are interested in the philosophy of history; "Legends and Tales" for the young and "Legends of the Jews" for those who have a bent for folk-lore; "Selections in Prose and Poetry" for the youth, and "Post-Biblical Hebrew Literature" for the adult; "Zionism" and "Ahad Ha'am" for those who wished to learn more about this modern movement in Israel; and "Jews in Many Lands" and "Hellenism" for those desiring to acquaint themselves with Israel's experience in various climes and in different cultures; "Stories of Jewish Home Life" and "Simon Eichelkatz" for some, and for others the writings of Perez and Zangwill. We have not only endeavored to satisfy a variety of tastes and requirements, but now and again brought into existence books which would serve the larger purposes of Israel among the nations.

In common with all peoples striving to maintain their identity and at the same time seeking the common good and who on various occasions and places are confronting prejudice, we need a literature of an aggressive and a defensive character. We must produce literature which will educate our people to know themselves and with this knowledge to ward off the insidious slanders which are cast upon us. These are a by-product of the so-called modern higher anti-Semitism which really dates from that time when Balaam cursed us with faint praise. We may not entirely stop these poisonous shafts, but we can shelter ourselves behind ramparts of Bibles, histories, ethical works, and classics. We can confound them with the illuminating rays of Moses ben Amram, Moses ben Maimon, and Moses ben Mendel. The Jewish Publication Society is the intellectual arsenal from which the necessary ammunition in the form of books, books, and more books may be secured with which to arm our people against the foes from without and perhaps what is more important—our enemies from within. We have no central church or rather synagogue government to centralize and direct our activities, but as Johanan ben Zakkai long ago observed: "Our only defence is the Torah" Let us then consecrate ourselves anew to the task of becoming the "People of the Book", by pledging ourselves to make the Book available in every Jewish home. We cannot help but quote the words of that distinguished Jewish tribune who bends his extraordinary faculties on behalf of Judaism and who, wherever he may be, proclaims aloud: "I am a Jew". A few days ago Mr. Marshall, speaking in New York, stated: "How many of our young men and women, born and educated in this country, have studied the word of God and have familiarized themselves with it? I am afraid that there are comparatively few. I have no doubt that they have read all the latest novels; that they have read many things that are supposed to be scientific, and can discuss some of the economic vagaries of political writers, and yet they have had at their command the greatest literature that the world has yet produced, the Bible, and our other great Hebrew works which they could read in translation if not in the original Hebrew. Nobody need fear that the Bible will interfere with his literary taste because it is in every sense of the word both as literature and as the repository of ethics and morals, superlative to any other written word".

The Society has just issued the fourth reprint of its New Translation of the Bible. Translators, publisher, printer, and binder have produced a work beautiful from every aspect, and it behooves us to see that not only this edition is distributed but that hundreds of thousands of additional copies are sent broadcast until there is no Jewish home in America that will not have one of our Bibles.

Financially, the Society is practically in the same position in which it was a year ago. We have reduced our liabilities slightly but there are still large printers' and binders' bills to be paid, and their patience is being rapidly exhausted. But still more menacing is the fact that without financial resources we cannot carry on our work. For the last few years we have endeavored to reach our communities but with meagre results. Our people are pretty well fed up on "drives" and we do not wish to interfere with other projects. In a quiet but intensive way we hope to find 10,000 Jews (a small number in a community numbering three and one-half millions) who will be willing to contribute $25.00 each to our sustaining fund and thus remove a reproach from Israel. It is incomprehensible that a community which can furnish $60,000,000.00 for relief of our European brethren will refuse to put on a firm basis the intellectual activities of American Jewry. With these funds we would first of all pay off our obligations and would then be in a position to carry out our other necessary projects. We hope to be able to report at the next Annual Meeting that our appeal has been met by American Jewry.

Since the last meeting we have sent to our members a volume by Prof. Margolis entitled "The Hebrew Scriptures in the Making". It is small in format but full of information, giving an admirable account of the problems connected with the Bible from a traditional and untraditional point of view. The Year Book contained timely information. The List of Events as in previous issues was retained but in a form which made the chronological tables read like a connected story. Dr. Harry S. Linfield summarized the happenings of the year in a readable article. The list of Jews of prominence in the United States, with its several minor errors of omission and commission, which is inevitable in all such lists, served the purpose of cataloguing the names of those in our midst who have distinguished themselves in various walks of life. In its compilation, the Secretary of the Jewish Publication Society aimed to present the names of those Jews in the United States "who have gained recognition in the world of science, art, religion, education, music, literature, drama, commerce and in civic and public affairs". The task was a difficult one and was performed with complete objectivity and impartiality. The 1735 names could not include the entire multitude of clever, versatile, and even brilliant Jews in the United States. It was a bewildering task to select among the thousands of names of Jews given in standard biographical reference books, and other places, the number which could be printed within the limited space; hence many errors of omission.

The third book was the volume by Yehoash entitled "The Feet of the Messenger". While of the making of books there is no end, there is a distinct dearth of Jewish books on travel. Of those who have toured through the Holy Land but few have made the pilgrimage in the spirit of Judah ha-Levi. It was, therefore, a happy decision to render into English the impressions of a trip to the Holy Land by an American, a Yiddish poet of scholarly attainments and general culture. The author went to settle in the Holy Land shortly before the World War, and therefore had a chance to observe life under normal conditions as well as during the early months of the catastrophe. With a pleasant sense of humor the author described the various types of the settlers of the Holy Land, as well as their surroundings and their relations with their Arab neighbors. The narrative reads smoothly and pleasantly and displays fine sensibilities. Since Robert Hichens wrote his colorful book on the Holy Land, it is doubtful whether such charming descriptions dealing with this subject have appeared in any language. The author has succeeded in introducing to the reader the real atmosphere of Palestine, particularly of Jewish Palestine. The quaint life and customs of the immigrant Jews are effectively and sympathetically portrayed.

There is a good deal of Jewish folk-lore given in the pages of this volume. The entire book is written in a festive spirit which the author succeeds in communicating to the reader, who is spell-bound by the beauty of the atmosphere. A very pathetic picture is given at the end, portraying the chaos and uncertainty which filled the atmosphere at the beginning of the War. At first the old settlers felt that the work of a life-time had been destroyed, but gradually this wore off as conditions began to be more or less stabilized. A very complimentary account is given of the conduct of American sailors towards poor refugees who were transported to safety.

The Society has now in type the Third Series of "Studies in Judaism" by the late Prof. Solomon Schechter. Though a posthumous publication, it is alive with the genius of the master Jewish essayist, and covers a number of subjects. It will take its place besides its companion volumes issued by the Society in 1896 and 1908. The Notes on the "Legends of the Jews" are also in type and soon the anxious and patient student of Jewish folk-lore will learn whence Prof. Ginzberg drew the wealth of legends contained in his four-volume work. The fifth and sixth volumes (for the Notes are many and instructive) will soon be published.

Slousch's "Travels in Northern Africa" and an attractive juvenile by Rufus Learsy entitled "Kasriel the Watchman" are in the process of publication. The Year Book will be issued before Rosh-ha-Shanah and will contain several interesting features. In the Classics Series a number of manuscripts have already been received and it may be definitely announced that the first volume in the Series which is now in press will be issued in the Fall of 1923. It contains a selection of the finest poems of Solomon Ibn Gabirol; the text has been edited and annotated by Prof. Israel Davidson and translated into English by Mr. Israel Zangwill. As was stated on another occasion, this initial volume of the Classics Series may be described as being the finest product of the noblest mind of medieval Jewry rendered into English by the foremost literary figure of modern Jewry.

The Hebrew press has been functioning for over a year. Its machinery and processes constitute a revolution in the art of Hebrew printing. Already it has published a number of volumes and is now printing the publications of learned societies. It has printed several numbers of the Jewish Quarterly Review, is printing the Journal of the American Oriental Society, and we hope it may become the plant from which will come forth the best printing of Oriental scientific works in America. It is a fairly busy press and will become more so from day to day.

No enterprise of the Society has as far reaching an effect nor one of greater importance to Israel than the proper interpretation of Scripture as intended in the projected Commentaries. After spending a large sum on it the Society has been compelled through lack of funds, at least temporarily, to suspend work on it. We are in receipt of the first completed work of a Commentary, that on Deuteronomy, which cannot be published on account of our finances. Will English-speaking Jews sit with folded arms and allow our initial outlay to be lost and the dream of every scholar, teacher, and intelligent layman to be rudely shattered?

To sum up. In the past year the Jewish people have again been challenged. We have a two-fold task to perform: to combat ignorance from within and prejudice from without. One of the most effective ways of meeting this challenge is by means of a wide distribution of Jewish literature including, primarily, the Bible. The Society is the only medium we have in America for the wide distribution of such literature. It needs not only the moral backing of our people but their interest must be manifested in a tangible financial form. We want our members and friends to ask other Jews to become members of the Society, and we ask those who can afford it to increase their annual contribution to the Society.

We trust that when the appeal reaches the 10,000 Jews, who believe that the Society is necessary for the preservation of our ideals, they will not hesitate to contribute their share. This appeal is particularly addressed to the leaders of Jewish thought and Jewish opinion. Failure to support the Society spells extinction, a catastrophe that would proclaim to the world the unwillingness of the Jew to retain his position as the torch-bearer of enlightenment to the whole world, and his rejection of the sacred inheritance from Sinai.

DR. ISRAEL ABRAHAMS' ADDRESS

I never hoped to realize my long-felt desire to meet the board of this famous organization in official session. My gratitude for many kindnesses, spread over thirty years, has often been told by letter. Now I can thank you face to face. And not for myself only. You have encouraged many to write, not merely by paying them generously for their work, but by providing that more unusual honorarium of a large circle of readers. I hear that some jestingly assert that you have fewer readers than subscribers. Still you can only take the horse to the well, you cannot make him drink. You really do more. You take the well to the horse. If the opportunity thus provided for quenching thirst is not accepted, the refusal argues not equine, but asinine obstinacy.

Now for all your kindness it would be a queer form of thanksgiving were I to offer you a lengthy address. Moreover, I entirely misunderstood what was expected of me. I thought from what your amiable secretary said to me, that your proceedings were strictly executive and that you had honored me with an invitation to be present and take a casual part in the discussions of the report. It was not till my arrival in this city that I realized that something more formal was expected of me. In the hour or two at my disposal this morning it was quite out of my power to prepare an address worthy of you or of the occasion.

Apart, too, from my personal anxieties now laid bare before you, I meet you at a time when the friends of literature have a very heavy task thrown upon them. The economic blockade so grimly engineered during the war scarcely equalled in fatal efficiency the blockade of the spirit which has since ensued. Students are still kept apart. Cannot the society bring them together? I appeal to it to make the attempt. Students are still kept apart by lingering animosities and by the cost of printing. We cannot get our books printed nor can we afford to buy the books which some of our number contrive to print. I know of fine works in both categories, books printed and too dear, books unprinted and for the moment dead. We recall Milton's protest against such a massacre. "Who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image, but he who destroys a good book, kills reason itself, kills the image of God, as it were, in the eye." Printers' prices are more devastating than even the censorship of the books against which Milton raged. Things are improving, but how slowly on our side, a small fact shows. A great printing house with which I have dealings notified me last week that prices were lowered. The decrease is 5 per cent; the previous increase over pre-war prices has been more than 150 per cent.

National animosities which still divide students are more serious, they will pass, but at the same snail's pace unless the speed of reconciliation is hastened. These antipathies were encouraged by short-sighted men of letters who, during the war, signed manifestoes more royalist than the king, or wrote prefaces more militant than the soldier. "Ye wise men be careful of your words"—how perennially insistent is this rabbinic warning. Think of Leopold Cohn forgetting it—he wrote an amazing little preface to the last volume of his Philo, published early in the war and right before his own lamented death in Breslau. In this preface he acclaimed Germany's early triumphs, and prayed for her complete victory. Cohn! The gentlest, the finest, and the sweetest of souls—and Philo, who with false philology, but true psychology interpreted "Jerusalem" to mean "the vision of peace," the seat of every soul "unwarlike and contemplative." Happily for erring humanity one may make a faux-pas and yet not lose the road to the City of God.

You will not accuse me of local patriotism when I praise England in this regard. The national animosities of scholars arising out of the war are almost non-existent with us; partly because the Englishman is temperamentally as good a peace-maker as he is a war-maker, partly because during the war's progress we remembered the peace that was to be. The war we saw must be but a temporary interruption of the comradeship of letters. What is learning if it pass not across the boundaries of state? Is a library a barrack? I do not claim that we had no chauvinism in Cambridge. There were some who thought a book (if heavy enough) a fit missile for the head of a foe. A new version of the Milhamtah shel Torah. But when, in Cambridge, a proposal was made to meet the Berlin academic manifesto by a counter-attack, the proposal was firmly rejected by us. During the last two years proposals for the resumption of international conferences of scholars emanated from England, and it if was actually found impossible to include representatives of both sides of the Rhine, the fault is just as far away as Paris is. I think that you will agree with me in applauding Dr. Stephen Wise's courage in inviting to the Jewish Institute of New York three distinguished Germans. I seriously suggest that the Society might improve upon this precedent. Why not make your next annual assembly an international congress of Jewish scholars? You and you alone can achieve so signal and so salutary a triumph. It would be to win the peace indeed. In the hope that you, or if not you, some other Jewish organization may make an end to the ravages of war, I feel inclined to sing songs of gladness in advance, and to say of these days, what Francis Thompson said of his own lovely lyrics:

Go, songs, and come not back from your far away;
And if men ask you why you smile and sorrow,
Tell them ye grieve, for your hearts know To-day,
Tell them ye smile, for your eyes know To-morrow.

There is a sentence in your president's report which, with his usual felicity, he states the position of Jewry apart from the consequences of the war, with very great precision. We have "to combat ignorance from within and prejudice from without." The former task is very much the heavier, Last year Mr. Stroock admirably discoursed on our duty to know ourselves. We know ourselves little, but the world knows itself less. This much it knows, though only subconsciously, that it needs us. Anti-Semitism is, in part at least the world's resentment at its need of us, and of its further conviction that we are not worthy of its need. We must be patient with the world and a good deal impatient only with ourselves. We must make ourselves more worthy of being needed. Your latest publication is happily entitled "The Feet of the Messenger." Bloomgarden was thinking lovingly of the message to Palestinian soil, the object of my love also; we may think further lovingly of the message to the Jewish soul. By no step have you done more to deliver this message than by broadcasting the Bible. The fact is that Jews have lost their old capacity to read the Bible in Hebrew and have never yet acquired a new affection for it in English. You have reached the soul of the Jew in many others of your books. No other organization, past or present, has approached you in the quantity and quality of its contributions to the enriching of the Jewish consciousness. Your performance, your plans, are alike unique. You are not proud. Then is your modesty as unparalleled as your achievement. I wish that Europe had had a greater share in the work of circulation of your books. The real obstacle is, I fancy, the Year Book. Is it necessary to make the issue of it an annual event? I think that your statistical reply to the question rouses a doubt. The plurality of votes in favor was hardly decisive. At all events, it ought to be made clearer to English subscribers that they can claim an alternative to that volume. Am I right in thinking this the case? If so, I offer my service to you in behalf of the acquisition of English members of the Society.

I have referred to Mr. Simon Miller's report read today. I would like also to allude to a passage in his illuminating report of last year. The most significant sentence, the sentence which appealed to me most, was this "The Trustees and the Publication Committee are considering a plan under which the Society may publish a considerably larger number of books than it does, but issue them in smaller editions." I know that you have from time to time subsidized works like Jastrow's Dictionary.

But if I may venture to intrude myself again on policy, I would ask you to consider seriously whether you could not more regularly give subventions to scholars whose books you do not yourself publish. If you do not, who will? Small editions of more books, and subventions to learned books—in these two directions the Society might make a fresh stride forwards. I know that your finances are not abundant, but subventions such as I allude to are often serviceable far beyond their pecuniary amount. A small sum may turn the scale between reluctance and goodwill on the part of the publisher. I can envisage a future speaker at this distinguished Society's assembly pointing with satisfaction soberly not only to the books which the Society has begotten, but to those also at whose birth it has presided. Take, for instance, the newly proposed history of the Jews, on the Cambridge scheme—a large series of volumes to be planned by a small group of English and American Jewish scholars, and to be written by a large number of experts of all nationalities. There can be no question of beginning the publication of so ambitious a work, but there is a question of preparing and publishing the plan. The plan itself, if elaborate and detailed enough, will of itself be helpful to students of history. But even this much will only be possible if the most general and generous approval is expressed by those in whom the Jewish public has confidence. A very small subvention from the Publication Society to the Historical Societies would be worth ten times its weight in gold; the encouragement would be priceless. Such a subvention would in no way prejudice any project the Society may have formed for a new one-volume history, containing in readable form the results of the latest researches and realizing the latest demand for a greater consideration of social and economical problems than Graetz was in a position to give. This brings me to my final theme, which, however I cannot develop at any length. The Society in a sense is a popularizing organization, but I must now allude to more learned and specialized works. It is these that cry aloud for smaller editions and for subventions. On what ground does one justify the uneconomic expenditure on learned books, books which do not pay their way? On the ground that with Jews literature and life are so bound up that unless the literature flows in ample stream the life is stagnant. With other communities, literature mostly denotes books which appeal to the average cultured intelligence. With us, literature denotes such books also, but it also includes books which appeal only and exclusively to a limited circle, to specialists.

Here, as in Europe, immense sums are expended in what is called non-productive, academic, scientific research. In my own university a large annual outlay is made over experiments which seem unrelated to the world's requirements. Do benefactors grudge this money? On the contrary, funds are provided with ever-increasing abundance. Here the generosity is as great. The justification is twofold. Truth must be pursued even where no pragmatic profit is gained; and truth, pursued in this spirit, has a tendency to profit in unexpected ways. From the laboratory of the specialists emerge discoveries which affect mankind; cures for diseases, methods of reducing labor, of bridging over distances, of beautifying the common life and of adding to its comforts.

Now as a non-scientific bookman myself I realize that I must beware of fanaticism in my estimation of the values of literature as distinct from science. Samuel Johnson once took Dr. Percy's little daughter on his knee, but when he found that she had not read Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress he ceased to fondle her and ignored her for the rest of his stay. One must not expect others to share all one's literary enthusiasms. But am I not justified in pushing home, on the literary side, the analogy of the moral part derived from the scientific side? I was told by a senior wrangler that one of the mathematical works, printed at great expense in Cambridge, was intelligible to only five livings minds. But, he added, the work had to be published, it was epoch-making, and in a generation its effects would be reflected in the elementary school books. Similarly—with Einstein's theories; intelligible to very few, yet the promulgation undeniably deserves every help that the world without understanding the theories feels itself able to provide.

Does it not stand so with Jewish learning? Truth can only be reached by research, and truth is an end in itself. We must resist the tendency to help only the truth which is pragmatically effective. How is one to test results till the results have been attained? Think of the labors and the funds vainly spent in Egypt before the papyri and the tombs more than compensated all the previous expenditure. In Jewish learning results when they do come may not be so sensational; yet the recovery of a lost cycle of poems of Yannai may be quite as important intrinsically as the finding of Pharaoh's gilded throne. The latter crumbles as it sees the light, the former gives light as it crumbles. It is from the library of the specialist that the Jewish mind and soul is ultimately enriched.

Sometimes the pragmatic effects are at once clear also. A social worker desirous of furthering the organization of international Jewish relief, was recently anxious to be directed to precedents in medieval records. He appealed to me for information and I was able to satisfy his curiosity without a moment's hesitation. Whence? From a very unlikely source at first sight. Dr. Jacob Mann spent many weary weeks copying out gaonic fragments in the Genizah or what Dr. Schechter—a veritable quickener of the dead carried from Cairo to Cambridge. Dr. Mann did the work under every difficulty, with small means to support himself, and with no encouragement except from Dr. Cyrus Adler, of Philadelphia. May both live long and hereafter be remembered for good. Well, Dr. Mann then published his texts and their interpretation in two expensive volumes, which would never have been printed by the Oxford Press without generous subventions, and this time from English sources. English philanthropy spends much more money in this way than is commonly known. Very learned, very specialized, are Dr. Mann's volumes, and yet they contain new and inspiring material on this very subject which interested my inquiring social worker. For these books provide a clearer account than we ever hoped to possess of the international Jewish organization in the tenth and twelfth centuries for the ransom of men captured by Levantine pirates. A new and fascinating chapter of Jewish social activity can be written from these texts. They seemed dry as dust; they prove of living charm. None but a specialist could have deciphered or explained them. But out of these specialists' toilsome grubbing and groping comes light to the Jewish world. Truly we do not live by bread alone, for what at the moment may seem a stone may turn out very nourishing food. The poet we are told discovered unexplored provinces of life. The specialist in learning is in this sense a poet. Unexplored provinces of life are the place of his activity. From these he extracts nourishment. The moment our specialists cease to function Jews and Judaism must begin to starve.

While this is so it is impossible to regard the future without anxiety, for though I have said something of English generosity the supporters of specialism are so few. Sometimes help comes from unexpected quarters. I was in Chicago on the 11th inst., and with Rabbi Fram was caught in a blizzard. We were a long way from the station, and taxis had ceased from troubling about fares. We were stranded, when a very small car wheezed by. The driver offered to help us. He did do. Arrived at the station he refused to accept payment. I gave some money to my companion in the hope that he would be able to persuade the driver to take it when he had conveyed Rabbi Fram home. I subsequently heard the sequel. The money with Rabbi Fram's own contribution was ultimately taken. The driver was a poor fellow, a former prize-fighter. The money was welcome. He explained his reluctance to accept it by saying that he had heard us telling about lectures and knew that men who earned their money that way were not in too affluent circumstances.

The helpfulness of this society has already relieved Jews from the disgrace of leaving the support of their learning entirely to such Gentile Hasidim.

This Society has done much and still has more to do for the English-speaking world. How vast that world is becoming. If we add England and her colonies to the United States it is obvious that within a few years the majority of the world's Jewish population will be speaking English. Of course, scholarship is not the whole of Jewish literature and not every man has a Schechter's capacity to work at once in a laboratory and present his results intelligibly to a wide public. Of old the tanna had his amora; the originator had his mouthpiece.

I say frankly that I can draw no exact line of demarcation in Jewish literature between learning and belles-lettres. The two are too closely wedded for divorce. Does the letter kill? Letters give life. Letters are your metier—research, popularization—whether it be the toiler of the soil or the florist who is at work, your market is open for all products. You create as well as expound. We ask you for more. We ask you to be adventurers, to disregard your unfavorable bank balance. Like King Mono-bazos you may fling open your royal treasures, freely offering of the jewels and gems and gold to save the famine-shrunk war-trying soul of Israel. Do you risk bankruptcy? Be careless, for King Monobazos' friend warned him, but he knew better. 'I am heaping up treasure in heaven,' he said. So may you say.
